

PROP 65 STATEMENT

Homedics is proud of its long-standing commitment to our retailers and customers of providing high quality, safe products which pose no health risks when used as designed. For this reason, until now, we have opted to take an ultra-conservative approach to California's Prop 65 law and provide warning labels on our products as well as our company websites.

However, the upcoming amended regulations adopted by the OEHHA for providing "clear and reasonable" Prop 65 Warnings has prompted Homedics to thoroughly review its current Prop 65 labelling. The law provides, in part, that a business is not required to provide a warning if exposure to a chemical occurs at or below the OEHHA developed "safe harbor levels."

Homedics has conducted independent third-party lab testing of all its products for the highest risk chemicals and the conclusive results are that all Homedics products fall within or below the safe harbor levels and pose no health risk. Therefore, in complete compliance with the law, we will be removing all Prop 65 warning labels on all our products going forward.
